

ARNOLD W. MEYER DIES OF APPENDICITIS

Former Iowa College Student and Instructor Dies Suddenly at His Home in Altoona

DECEASED HAD TAUGHT IN GRINNELL RECENTLY

Was a Fine Young Man, Facing a Life Full of Promise—Was Sick Only a Few Days.

Grinnell people were shocked this week to learn of the sudden death of Arnold W. Meyer, following an attack of appendicitis, at his home in Altoona, Sioux county. Mr. Meyer graduated from Iowa College in 1899 and from 1905 to 1907 was assistant in the chemical department here. Last year he received his doctor's degree in chemistry from Columbia University and this year was to have been research assistant under the Carnegie endowment at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

He had been perfectly well until suddenly taken with appendicitis a few days ago and his death was not anticipated by family or friends.

He was a fine type of a college man, a thorough student, a hard worker, possessed of high ideals and strong character. During his years here as student and instructor he had made many warm friendships and won the respect of everyone who came to know him among both faculty and students. His death takes from the College one of her loyal sons for whom she expected a large and useful life. The College and town of Grinnell mourn with the family for the untimely taking off of one whose life was so full of promise for himself and others.
