Henry Cooper.

Succumbing to an illness which in its beginning did not appear serious, Henry Cooper, one of the most deservedly prominent of the present generation of college students, passed away at 5 o'clock on Wednesday evening. He was so well known and the announcement of his death was so unexpected, that the sad news created a great shock all over the city. An extremely beautiful funeral service was held at the H. W. Somers home yesterday afternoon, conducted by Professor Charles Noble. A quartette composed of Misses Helen Thomson and Stella Bartlett and Fred Carney and Dr. E. E. Harris, furnished music.

H. W. Somers left with the body this morning for Omaha, where he will be met by the parents of the dead boy, who will take the body to the home in Whitewood, S. D., for interment.

Henry Cooper was a member of the college class of 1913, of which he was president. He was a young man of exceptional promise. His interests were chiefly musical and he had made his mark along that line in his college course. He had been a member of the college orchestra for three years, had developed the college band to a high point of efficiency and was also the head of a small orchestra which bore his name. Last summer he organized a trip for this orchestra which covered a good part of Iowa and Dakota, ending with a house party at his home in
