

R. B. Cranston Of Deep River Dies

4-28-1925
On Wednesday evening, April 15, this entire community was greatly shocked when the news that R. B. Cranston had been found dead in his home was flashed around. His son, Clint, on going to his father's home, found his lifeless body on a couch where he had lain down to rest. He had been in his usual health and had been about his work as usual on the day of his death and no one suspected that he was so near the end of his long and useful life. He left his impress on this community in many good works. The funeral was held at the home on Friday, conducted by Rev. Lloyd Tennant, of West Liberty. Interment was in Goldenrod cemetery.—Deep River Record.
