A telephone communication to the First National Bank, yesterday afternoon, brought the sad intelligence that R. M. Kellogg had passed away. Mr. Kellogg had been staying at the home of his son-in-law, W. R. Moninger, at Galvin, for some weeks, where he died yesterday. He was in his usual health yesterday morning, and in the forenoon hitched up to the buggy and took a bucket of oats to the pasture to suit the cattle. As he did not return at the usual dinner hour, search was made and he was found dead. Indications are that he died instantly with heart failure. His remains were brought home this morning, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Moninger. The funeral will be held at the house, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Prof. L. F. Parker, and the remains will be laid to rest in Hazelwood cemetery.

He was keenly sensitive for himself, yet quite as much so for others. Comparative strangers could never know how much he valued human friendship, and would be surprised at his love of the cordial greetings of the young, even, as he met them on the street. He never forgot even a trifling favor, and loved to repay it over and over again in words and in deeds.

Failing health compelled him to be comparatively inactive during later years. His weak heart gave way in a moment, at last, and he was gone. The world has been bereft by his life. His memory

AUG. 31 IN MEMORIAM, 1900

Sympathetic friends have borne to Hazelwood all that was mortal of another early settler, Raymond M. Kellogg. He was born near Rutland, Vt., July 15, 1825, a member of a prominent family of that state. He came to Grinnell when thirty years old, joined the Congregational church, and became a leading builder at once. He took part in the erection of many buildings in the town, probably, than any other resident of the place, — such as college buildings, the first church, the first Methodist church, the Stone church, our school-houses and a very large number of residences. When "the Stone church" was erected he was chairman of the building committee and devoted his entire time to that until it was completed.

He was active in politics, but not for the sake of office — although he was a member of the town council more than once and served the public schools as a director. He was a delegate to the first Iowa republican convention in 1850, and always took pride in his part in helping to organize the grand old party. He was a director of the First National Bank twenty-three years and active in all town interests until after his health failed. He was liberal in the use of time and of money for the public good.

No man was ever more devoted to his family and to his relatives. He was never weary of speaking of their successes, and his eyes moistened in sympathy with their sorrows.

As a member of the Old Settlers' association he was especially interested in preserving the history of every one else, but could not be induced to write his own. He was especially careful to remember the absent. He could criticize the faults of his town, yet thought that, all in all, there was no other equal to it.

will be cherished by his brethren in the Masonic order, in the church and wherever he was known.

Mr. Kellogg had won many friends in Galvin during his frequent visits to his daughter, Mrs. W. R. Moninger. A large company escorted the funeral party to the railroad station at Albion, on the way to Grinnell.

The funeral services were held at his late home Wednesday afternoon, August 1, at two o'clock, conducted by Professor Parker, assisted by Professor Edson. The music was by a quartet consisting of Messrs. Brands and Atkinson and Mrs. Christian and Mrs. Heibel. Kind friends assisting as bearers were: Honorary, E. J. Macdonald, Wm. Heaton, D. Vanderveer, J. Child, H. I. Davis and Hon. Joel Stewart. The active bearers were, George H. Hamlin, H. W. Norris, Leonard Walker, Jas. Rutherford, A. L. Child and C. G. Keister.

A wife, two daughters and one son survive him.

KELLOGG, Raymond M. b. Rutland, Vt. July 15, 1825, came to Grinnell in 1855, took part in the erection of more buildings than any other — college buildings M. E. Church, the Stone church, school houses and residences. Was a delegate to the first Republican convention in 1850 and Director of the first National bank for 23 years. Was liberal in use of time and money for public good. Was a member of the Old Settlers Association. Died July, 1900. Two daughters, Harriett and Mrs. W. R. Moninger and one son, survived in 1900. Harriett died in 1915 or 1916 and Mrs. Moninger in Mar. 1923. Ob
